

TESTIMONIALS

Most of us don't believe in the reality of all Testimonials!

When I said “Most of us” it included myself. In spite of all this, after doing some profound thinking, we realized that we should post them, otherwise we will betray trader's interest, due to the following reasons:

- Firstly, we should firmly act and dissipate trader's incredulity, by supplying him/her the e-mail address of the testimonial writer, if is demanded privately. Thus, not only they will both communicate, but why not, they will exchange reciprocal advantaged trading ideas.
- Secondly, the Testimonials could constitute a real golden mine (in my humble opinion) for the learning of trading, especially for the novice traders, once the incredulity has been dissipated.
- And thirdly, it could greatly assist the founder of this website and author of the two books and 12 seminar Courses, to better reach the most optimal audience!

I thank you, from heart, for us and for the new trading generation!

A very good morning to you good Sir Mircea,

I believe your work, from what I have seen is a truly great contribution and the depth and accessibility of the teachings have a clear and simple (simplifying), yet deeply complex and analytical style...

You deserve great esteem for this work and I hope you recognise yourself and that others will do so.

From what I have seen, although it defies instinct, I find it likely that you have priced your work at an appropriate level. There is a sense that it is 'too valuable' as often books can be actually, but in this case, I think you would be 'throwing out the baby with the dishwater' as we say in idiomatic expression here (probably of French origin, given most of us are!)... if you were too go lower.

Have a great day. I have some teaching today so will stay out the market.

Best

Sam

Greetings Dear Teacher and I wish you a Happy New Year 🎉 🎊 🌟

I just received with enchantment the new volume (IV) of Elliott Waves series...The chapter 13 is indeed a very interesting one, concerning the trading jewels. YES... I agree the entire volume IV can be considered as a trading jewel. Until now, Volume I of the preceding INTEGRATED PITCHFORK ANALYSIS series was my favorite, but now it was replaced by the Elliott Waves volume IV.

With deep Consideration
Danny

Dr. Dologa:

I viewed your new website with a great deal of interest this morning, after a staff member at the CME referred me to the URL. I appreciate you mentioning that a large number of traders at both the CME and CBOT now use Median Lines in their trading... I've found the articles you've been publishing interesting and I think you've done a good job developing your own style with combining these tools alongside other trading tools. I would never dream of featuring your style and selection of tools, for instance, in one of the webinars and seminars I give at the CME and CBOT without giving you full credit. And in fact, there are already several educators [Joe DiNapoli, for example] that I mention regularly. The community of pitchfork educators is a small one. Only a handful of us are around that studied with Dr. Andrews and there are a few more that publish quality materials on trading featuring pitchforks--and I count you amongst this group.

Bonjour Michael.

nice to see a picture of you.

One of the things I wonder about is the Egyptians using 'pitchforks' already. I guess your B.S. in Physics helped you to recognise that. Despite your pictures, I still have a hard time believing what I am seeing. Maybe it is because in school I mostly had a 'Tres Mal' in Physics. :)

<<We list them for the novice traders: classic & un-orthodox trend lines, "ladder" like rectangles, classic pitchfork, Wolfe waves, Elliott waves and Jenkins' circle (see course Contents).>>

you really did study (almost) everyone that is or was around. :)
Have you ever looked at Gann or Astrology? What is your view on those two?

I mentioned your site in one of the groups I am in and

Hi Mircea,

I read the book you sent to me. I'm really impressed!
I'm not just saying that since you are my friend. I think you covered an enormous range of trading topics. Maybe you should send ... (to a Trading Guru) Chapter 12 of Volume I so he can get a clue to the opening orders instead of his shotgun approach.

You look like you have studied and mastered the topics.
Good luck!

Walter

Dr. Dologa,

Thanks for replying to my email. It is not a question of "IF" I will buy your course, but "WHEN". Money is a little tight at the moment, but should loosen up in the next month or two. But, when I started reading the files you attached, I find myself wanting to go ahead and get it sooner rather than later.

As for your suggestions on pursuing the money management & psychological aspects of trading, they are right on target. I have been updating personal studies for the last few years, and just last week came to the conclusion that the main reason for my losses of the last few years was not putting market risk into the equation of my individual stock risk. When there is more market risk, I need to utilize tighter money management controls to decrease the individual stock risk.

I know my question about whether or not I can attain my goals via your method is a loaded question. There are so many individual issues involved with answering such a question.

As for my question about the method enhancing YOUR bottom line, I hope you didn't take offense. It is a question that comes from dealing with other trading method vendors. There are a lot of vendors out there who make more money selling knowledge than they do trading that knowledge. Some even sell the knowledge and do not even trade at all. I am just trying to avoid that type of situation. I would rather study under someone who is in the trenches successfully practicing what he preaches. I REALLY appreciate your background and info on your real estate history. Real estate is something I have had absolutely no luck in at all. Amazing, but true.

I have no knowledge of pitchforks other than a very basic idea of how they plot. There is no doubt your first book is needed. I really wish your second book would be out sooner than 2007. Can a person do well trading from what is taught in the first book?

A few remaining questions. Do you rely heavily on Elliott Wave? I notice your TASC article was heavy on the Elliott. Also, you recommend starting with the e-mini. My trading account consists solely of my IRA of which I would have to move to another broker to trade futures within my IRA.

Last, are you originally from France? My ancestors are from Nova Scotia.

Thanks for all the help!!!

I am very impressed. I like the theme of the Pharaoh's workers with the use of the Pitchfork. I'm surprised, however, that you didn't integrate more Elliott Wave into your method as it seems to be an integral part of your trading technique. One observation was that on your Article page you list the articles you have written. I suggest you link to the actual articles as a free part of your sight. In doing that you will convince them of your expertise and generosity as well.

All in all I liked it very much and wish you all the best of success with it!

Best Regards,
La

Dr. Dologa:

Thank you for your article! I sincerely appreciate your help and look forward to your further assistance.

I applaud you for the tremendous work you have done in this area, and your contributions in helping other traders.

I have only recently incorporated the pitchfork into my trading but know it will be of immeasurable value.

Many thanks,
Dennis Z

Dr. Mircea Dologa is a friend of mine. He is a trader in Paris and a very accomplished man in numerous areas. His American friends call him Michael. He has just completed his new website offering his techniques based on the Pitchfork originated by Alan Andrews. I have not as yet viewed the course but I have read a number of his articles and can say he is a very smart guy and willing to be helpful in any way. The first volume course is designed for Introductory or Intermediate levels where he combines the pitchfork theory with Fibonacci relationships and some of his own work such as conventional and unconventional trend line drawing.

He will be adding Elliott Wave Theory to this methodology in the future for a more advanced approach as he has become quite adept in the EW techniques. I know we are a small group but he asked me to spread the word for him and I am not in many other groups. I urge you to at least visit his site and would very much appreciate it if some of you who are in Nqoos and other groups such as that could pass this on to them. If you do, please drop me a note and let me know where you sent it!

"Dr Mircea Dologa well known author and trader has published a new book on pitchfork trading. It is in the format of a logical course on trading utilizing the pitchfork but also incorporating the other tools for successful trading. He focuses on integrated pitchfork trading. What this means is that he uses the pitchfork and other techniques e.g. Fibonacci, Rectangles and Elliott wave collectively in order to arrive at trading decisions and management. There are detailed refinements of the basics e.g. mini pitchforks and action/reaction lines. The book is very thorough with good examples. You can download excerpts from the book at http://www.pitchforktrader.com/book_excerpts.pdf (just more than 3 megs). Or go directly to www.pitchforktrader.com to download.

There are 19 chapters, 375 pages and 420 charts.

Please note that I don't receive any financial gain from the sale of his book. The only reason I have written this text is for the purpose of sharing.

It's amazing how much I glean from the book in a second reading. I think your book is one of those rare references that contain so much information that it takes years to digest it all, maybe never. I thought long and hard to find some suggestions for you, but I am hard-pressed to find anything meaningful. Your book is beautifully executed. The many graphs throughout your book make for a wonderful presentation. And, your meticulous narratives, accompanying the pictures, deliver the complex content in a very effective manner. All I can say is that if you deliver your next book with the same quality as your first book, that will be quite an achievement. I can find no fault with your first book!

The comprehensiveness of your book makes me wonder what there is left to say in a second book? I can't wait to be surprised!

I have always been curious about something. Apparently, Babson made a huge fortune, something like $50-million using the pitchfork method. In today's prices, Babson's fortune must be closer to $500-million. Do you think that the pitchfork method can fully account for Babson's advantage in the market? Do you think it's possible to duplicate Babson's feat in today's market? Or, did Babson conceal something about his methodology?

If Babson and Andrews made millions using the pitchfork method, why would they be inclined to teach others? Wouldn't that just ruin a good thing? Why wouldn't they keep it a secret?

I would be interested in your thoughts on this.

Best Regards,
Ro... ..
